

The RNLI and the RYA are working hard to ensure we can make this summer as safe as it can be. We know no-one heads to the coast or out on their boats expecting to be rescued, yet each year many are and sadly some lose their lives.

The RNLI is advising:

- Despite Coronavirus the RNLI will lifeguard approximately 70 beaches, down from the originally planned 240
- Volunteer lifeboat crews are fully operational should they be needed, but anyone going afloat must understand the risks and take the necessary steps to keep themselves safe
- We must all take reasonable precautions to reduce the demands on lifeboat crews, HM Coastguard and other emergency services

Additionally, the RYA and RNLI urge you all to consider:

- Whether your activity complies with Government regulations for social distancing and travel
- Whether your vessel has been maintained properly and is seaworthy, reducing the risk of needing external assistance?
- All emergency equipment is in working order and the crew know how to use it
- Using the RYA SafeTrx app which can monitor your journey and can alert emergency services if needed
- Anything else that may increase the potential demand on emergency services including experience levels and prevailing conditions

RYA and RNLI safety advice remains:

- Have a plan - think about your route, check the weather forecast and tide times
- Know your limits - take extra care ashore or afloat and think about the limitations of your crew
- Look after yourself - ensure your boat and your crew are properly equipped for the trip; has everyone got a lifejacket or buoyancy aid?
- Keep in touch - carry a means of calling for help and share your RYA SafeTrx plan
- If you fall into the water FLOAT TO LIVE. Fight your instinct to thrash around, lean back, extend your arms and legs, and float
- In any coastal emergency, even if you are unsure, notify the Coastguard by dialling 999 or VHF 16

Stay alert, control the virus, save lives
